Lead Instructor

Ken Afienko graduated from police academy in 1981 and worked for the Madeira Beach Police Department. Ken was the senior sergeant, briefly serving as interim Chief of Police, in 1991. In 1995, Ken decided to attend law school and graduated in 1998 from Stetson College of Law, earning a J.D. After graduating, he began to practice in the field of insurance defense. Soon thereafter in 1999, Ken accepted a part-time position with the Pinellas Park Police Department until he retired in March 2015, he still works with the Pinellas Park Police Department as a reserve officer. In addition, in 2001, Ken became the in-house counsel with the Fraternal Order of Police. Ken provides a wide range of representation to not only police officers, but firefighters, paramedics and other government employees that face legal issues involving their employment.
